Welcome to the 12th International AWID Forum!

We look forward to four very stimulating days of thinking, exchange, and strategizing around our collective task of "Transforming Economic Power to Advance Women’s Rights and Justice."

This Forum is coming at a time when we face some of the most pressing challenges to women’s rights as well as human rights and environmental sustainability. Systemic crises, financial meltdowns, environmental disasters, increased inequality and poverty, and intensified repression and violence are having a tremendous negative impact on people’s livelihoods and rights around the world. Economic power is at the crux of many of these trends and it intersects with all women’s rights and justice issues.

The convergence of close to 2,000 women’s rights and justice advocates from across the globe is a tremendous opportunity to take our thinking and strategizing to a new level. Our ambitious goals for this 2012 AWID Forum are to:

• Facilitate learning on the role and impact of economic power in diverse women’s rights agendas, experiences and issues.
• Support bridge-building across diversities among women’s groups and movements and with other social movements.
• Advance proposals on feminist visions and practices to resist, challenge and transform dominant forms of economic power.
• Identify opportunities for participants to engage in concrete joint action beyond the Forum.

The program for the coming days reflects a collaborative effort, guided by the over 30 members of the Forum International Planning Committee. In addition to the daily plenaries and breakout sessions organized by a broad array of groups, which are the hallmark of AWID Forums, this time we also offer six hour In-Depth sessions for those who want to go deeper into issues, and Feminist Economic Toolbox sessions to build understanding of key dimensions of economic power. You can also choose from activities in our new Forum Hubs. Take a moment for yourself at the Wellness Area, share news with your social networks at the Feminist ICT Hub, explore effective learning processes at the Economic Education Area or deepen your analysis of funding trends and skills in the Resource Mobilization Hub.

I want to appreciate the contributions and generosity of the members of the International Planning Committee who helped shape this Forum. I want to thank the many organizations and partners that have taken on different roles at the Forum, as well as the donors that have come forward in support of the belief that spaces such as this are key for informing our organizing and strategizing.

Finally, I want to thank you for joining us in Istanbul. It is your contributions and active engagement that will make the Forum a success. In return, I hope you will leave inspired with new energy, ideas, alliances that will help you continue your struggles to transform economic power to advance women’s rights and justice worldwide.

In solidarity,

Lydia Alpizar Durán
Executive Director, AWID
ABOUT AWID

Our mission: what we do
AWID’s mission is to strengthen the voice, impact and influence of women’s rights advocates, organizations and movements internationally to effectively advance the rights of women.

Our vision: why we do it
AWID believes that women’s rights are not only necessary in and of themselves, but that they are central to ending the challenges the world faces today. Eradicating poverty, building peace, effectively tackling the HIV and AIDS pandemics, to name just a few – no lasting solutions to these issues are possible without a strategy that puts women’s rights at the centre. AWID works to build a world where women’s rights have been achieved and where all people enjoy their human rights.

Our values: the principles that guide our work
• Our work is built upon feminist values toward the full equality of women and human rights of all people. This includes work towards the eradication of all discriminations based on gender, sexuality, religion, age, ability, ethnicity, language, nationality, class or other factors.
• We are committed to work as part of a movement to build our collective voice, power and influence.
• We are committed to diversity and inclusion by bringing marginalized voices and perspectives to the table in the pursuit of human rights for all.
• In all our interactions we strive for transparency, responsible use of financial resources, fairness, accountability and integrity.
• We will work independently from any political party, government or religious institution.
• We will strive for excellence, while being creative, bold and courageous.

Our outcomes: what we hope to achieve
In working with diverse partners and allies and our broader constituency AWID seeks to achieve the following seven outcomes by the end of our Strategic Plan
1 Stronger, better-resourced and more effective women’s organizations and movements advancing women’s rights and gender equality worldwide.
2 Renewal and expansion of the agendas of women’s movements internationally through infusion of ambitious, creative and future oriented ideas and issues, and stronger interconnections, alliances and partnerships among diverse expressions of women’s organizing across regions and sectors.
3 Stronger alliances between women’s rights movements and other social movements to advance agendas in pursuit of human rights for all.
4 Shifts in donor and development policy and practices for a greater financial and political commitment to gender equality and women’s rights, including women’s organizations.
5 Greater inclusion of women’s rights activists and organizations in key development policy spaces internationally (both in terms of presence and effective voice in influencing these spaces to advance gender equality).
6 More visible, vocal and engaged young women in women’s organizations and movements with young women’s work clearly supported and highlighted, including across all AWID initiatives.
7 A more politically engaged and expanded AWID membership that includes increased representation from underrepresented regions or sectors.

In order to achieve our mission and outcomes, AWID works through multi-year initiatives.

Our Membership
AWID strongly believes in building collective power to advance women’s rights and gender equality worldwide and our members are dedicated to working with us towards this goal.

A dynamic network of women and men from around the world, AWID members are activists, researchers, academics, students, educators, business people, policymakers, development practitioners, funders, and more.

AWID has more than 3,000 members of which more than 500 are institutional members. Our members come from more than 130 countries of the world with the majority based in the Global South. A third of our members are young women under the age of 30.
MAKING THE AWID FORUM A SAFE SPACE

What we expect from Forum participants and AWID’s commitment

What kind of space is the AWID Forum? The AWID Forum is an open space, which means AWID does not control who registers to participate in the Forum, but we do control, with our International Planning Committee for the Forum, which groups organize sessions. With close to 2,000 participants converging in Istanbul, we are convening a tremendously diverse event with delegates representing over 120 countries and very diverse communities.

Our aspirations

Although the Forum is an open space, we are committed to doing our utmost to ensure that it is as safe a space as possible. This means ensuring that only registered Forum participants are able to access the Forum venue. It also means being explicit with Forum participants about the kind of space we expect the Forum to be. We have to all take responsibility to make the forum a safe and exciting space that is respectful of diversity. The following values reflect the way in which AWID aspires to work, and what we ask from participants in the Forum.

- DIVERSITY: Forum participants come from diverse backgrounds, beliefs, abilities, and experiences. We believe in sharing the space and working together in a way that promotes inclusion, respect, and learning from each others diverse realities.
- HUMAN RIGHTS: We work towards the full respect, protection, and promotion of the rights enshrined in CEDAW and other international human rights laws and against fundamentalisms of all sorts that threaten these rights. Human rights must be seen as indivisible, interdependent, inalienable, and universal.
- AUTONOMY: We champion a person’s right to choose her relationships, her goals, her dreams, and what she wants to do with her mind, body, and spirit.
- COOPERATION: We work towards a world and an economic system based on social, environmental, and economic justice; and interdependence, solidarity, and respect rather than competition, market domination, commodification, and exploitation of people and nature.
- RESPONSIBILITY: In all of our work, we will strive for transparency, responsible use of resources, fairness in our relations, accountability, integrity, and excellence.

What we ask from you as Forum participants

We ask you to enjoy the space, make the best of it, and take advantage of the amazing diversity of participants at the Forum. But we know that differences in opinion can arise from different personalities, goals, values, and circumstances. Differences and disagreements can be useful in pushing us to consider new perspectives, learn, and engage with other ways of thinking. However, this does not include language or actions that reflect disrespect, harassment, or discrimination based on gender, sexuality, religion, age, ability, health condition, ethnicity, language, nationality, class, occupation, or other factors.

AWID asks all Forum participants to engage in a way that is in line with the values identified above and to refrain from:

- Engaging in threatening, discriminatory, abusive, harassing, defamatory, hateful, homophobic, lesbophobic, transphobic, xenophobic, or otherwise objectionable speech, and behaviour.
- Promoting or engaging in violent action: this includes threatening or attempting to incite violence toward another person, group, or entity.
- Engaging in ad hominem attacks (attacking a fellow participant rather than the content of the comment itself), stalking, or otherwise harassing others.
- Invading a fellow Forum participant’s privacy, including publicizing without permission photos, videos, or quotations from Forum participants that might put the person at risk or in an undesirable situation.

AWID’s commitment to facilitating a safe space

Session facilitators and speakers are encouraged to ask disruptive participants who are not respecting this spirit of engagement to leave their sessions. AWID reserves the right to ask a Forum participant to leave the forum space if engaging in any discriminatory or disruptive behaviour described above.

All Forum participants are encouraged to contribute to building a Forum space that is consistent with these values. You can contact any AWID staff person if you have questions or need support.
PLENARY SESSION 1
Economic Power: Why does it matter and how to understand it in the current global context?

Hmmm…"

You will come away from this plenary thinking about economic power in a whole new way, and in particular how it connects to your everyday work and activism. What is economic power? What are some of the key elements in dominant economic systems that we should be paying attention to? How has relevant analysis from feminists and women's rights activists evolved over time? This plenary will address these questions as well as the relevance and necessity of effective strategies to transform economic power given the current moment and global context. Speakers will open your thinking to more effectively understand and participate in critical economic debates that impact on and intersect with all women's rights issues and agendas.

PLENARY SESSION 2

Key Context Trends and Some Proposals for Transformation

“Aha!”

Economic power cuts across all aspects of life, with important implications and possibilities for women’s rights. This plenary will highlight some of the key trends and their implications for transforming economic power in different arenas such as work, the environment and possibilities for sustainable development, militarism, violence, and culture. Speakers will also offer insights and possibilities on some of the specific proposals or alternatives that different groups are pursuing. This plenary will provide you with an understanding where we are and imagining the possible. If we were to influence and transform economic power across these different dimensions, what might that look like?

PLENARY SESSION 4
The Task Ahead

“Let’s go!”
What insights and learning can you take from the last four days of debate and exchange? What are key questions that we need to continue grappling with to inform our strategizing? What are some of the specific ideas or proposals that have emerged in terms of transforming economic power to advance women’s rights and justice? This plenary will aim to tie together some of the pieces—synthesizing, where possible, Forum debates and discussions thus far and suggesting strategies that can take us forward across lines of difference to confront and transform structures of economic power to advance women’s rights and justice.

Over the last thirty years, she has written extensively about democracy, citizenship, the state, and globalization from a feminist political perspective.
IN-DEPTH SESSIONS

For the first time, AWID has worked with several partners to develop a series of In-Depth Sessions at the Forum. These sessions, which each run for six hours (four blocks of 1.5 hours each), have been designed to provide for deeper levels of discussion on complex issues. The extended time-frame will allow you to go more “in-depth” on key issues and come away with a stronger understanding of the session theme and concrete strategy ideas to take home. These sessions also aim to facilitate deeper cross-regional and cross-sectoral movement engagement as session organizers go beyond information sharing — inviting you to have more substantive debates and interaction. You are encouraged to stay throughout the four session blocks in order to get the most out of the session.

Access To and Control Over Resources: Organizing for women’s economic empowerment
Consumer-driven capitalism, the elimination of social safety nets and the privatization of public goods and services has turned everything, from land and capital to healthcare, technology, clean air, and even political influence, into a commodity—accessible only to those willing and able to pay a price. The resulting inequities in access to and control over resources are the product of a democracy deficit, where the interests of a few are served on the backs of the many, most especially those marginalized by their ethnicity, race, class, gender, sexuality, nationality, and location. As entrenched as this neoliberal economic model may seem, alternatives do exist, pioneered by women working on the front lines of social justice struggles and based on more sustainable, democratic values of solidarity, mutuality, and human rights.

This session will explore the various factors that influence women’s access to and control over resources, enabling participants to identify openings and inspiration to advance change. We will draw on case studies to illustrate how women are mobilizing their collective organizing power to cope with the medicalization of HIV and AIDS in Southern Africa; push back against land grabs in Guatemala; and build movements around alternatives to conventional microcredit schemes in Indonesia.

Changing World Geopolitics and Global Governance: Making sense of the trends, actors, and their implications for women’s rights
Why and how is global governance relevant to women’s rights and why is it so complex and difficult to talk about in the current world reality? With contributions from key leaders and thinkers in this field, participants will learn about relevant characteristics of the current global context, exploring for example the connections between how growth is defined and progress is measured, the influence of the current economic recession and interlocked crises (food, energy, environmental, humanitarian, etc.), increased militarization and other key phenomena within current global governance arrangements and shifts.

This session will look at some of the actors and institutions (new and old) defining what global governance looks like today. It will provide space for brainstorming our vision of future global governance to advance women’s rights, justice, environmental sustainability, and human rights. Then we will discuss the implications for our own strategizing as women’s rights activists. We will close with ‘what’s next’ on the global agenda, for example: the structures being proposed as part of the Rio+20 agenda; the Cairo and Beijing + 20 process; the G20 process ahead; proposals for reshaping global financial architecture; the proposed new global partnership for effective development cooperation; and the likely post-MDG or Beyond 2015 development framework.

Ecological Health of our Planet: The climate change challenge
This session aims to critically examine the current frameworks of climate change adaptation and sustainability including Rio Plus 20 and the Green Economy; expose participants to new multi-stakeholder partnerships and funding mechanisms that promote a decentralized, pro-poor approach to climate risk management and adaptation; and outline strategic lines of action to scale up the leadership of women and advance women’s economic and political status in communities.

Presented in an interactive format, this session will allow participants to hear from grassroots women leaders who, despite living in climate threatened rural and urban informal settlements, have pioneered innovative adaptation initiatives to protect the development assets of communities, and create win-win opportunities for communities and governments. Institutional stakeholders and partners will unpack the current climate change and sustainable development policies and discuss gender equity and women’s empowerment priorities within these negotiations. Speakers will pinpoint institutional and government support that is necessary in order to create an enabling environment to close national-local disconnects, and create climate financing models that work for the poor. Participants will be encouraged to discuss and debate strategies and solutions to implement collaborative risk reduction and adaptation strategies that improve women’s status and living conditions amidst climate threats.

IN-DEPTH SESSIONS

Militarism, Conflict, and Violence
This session builds on ongoing concerns and understandings of militarism, violence, and armed conflict, how these issues impact women’s lives, and ways women have been organizing for a peaceful world.

It will engage participants in a series of conversations that examine the processes and gender-specific impacts of militarism, militarization, armed conflict and violence. It will address concerns and analyses from the local to the global, create space to learn about and discuss women’s resilience and resistance, brainstorm creative ways to confront these challenges, and promote an end to conflict and gender-based violence.

The focus of the session will be on the economics of militarism and its gendered dimensions. It will also address the processes whereby the logic and values of militarism become normalized and embedded in communities and societies, including those living under occupation, and look at what constitutes genuine security from a feminist perspective. The intersections of militarism with gender, race, class, and sexuality—including sexual violence and violence against women human rights defenders—are other examples of important issues to be explored. The session will provide a space to share strategies and experiences of resistance, healing, peace-building, and utilization of UN resolutions and alternative forms of transitional justice.

Women’s Rights and Transitions to Democracy in the MENA Region
This session will examine in depth the challenges and opportunities that women’s rights activists face in the context of revolutionary movements and democratization processes taking place in the MENA region. Participants will share analysis and experiences from across the region, outlining challenges such as the increased presence and power of religious fundamentalist actors in the region, discussing strategies that have yielded positive results and learnings from past transitions in other regions. Participants will also brainstorm and analyze potential implications of recent developments in the MENA region for global women’s rights agendas and struggles. Finally, the session will explore how the analysis, experiences, and lessons learned can be applied to strengthen future strategizing, alliance-building, and collaboration; with a view to identifying concrete steps for action to build solidarity and joint mobilization in support of feminists and women’s rights movements in the MENA region.

Re-envisioning Development, Exploring Alternative Constructions Across the Globe
In the context of converging crises, this session aims to contribute to the debate on challenging the mainstream economic model from a critical feminist perspective.

By convening a range of voices from different movements and sectors, the session will begin by unpacking development, departing from the understanding that development is a politically constructed process and therefore can be defined, envisioned, and (re)formulated in different ways. The mainstream development model will be discussed and its failures underscored.

While alternatives is a contested term, debates around diverse approaches to and within the mainstream model have been happening for decades. The session will focus on re-envisioning development, and sharing existing alternative constructions from across the globe. Frameworks and practices that challenge and aim to transform neoliberal development (and in some cases address the urgent needs of today)—such as el buen vivir, food sovereignty, diverse economies, de-growth, and the protection of the commons—will be explained and critically examined from a feminist perspective.

Finally, we will focus on the ways in which groups are presently pushing these alternatives forward. Given that global structures shape local possibilities, are there opportunities for scaling up? And, more broadly, how do we envision the role of feminist movements and groups in these debates?

Women’s Labor Rights, Gender Equality, and Economic Justice: A discussion of issues and actions
This session will examine the challenges to women’s labor rights in the context of the global economic crisis, their link to economic justice and gender equality over the long term; and what strategies women, labor unions, and worker’s rights organizations are implementing to advance a women’s rights agenda.

The six hour session will be divided into four segments. The first will consist of an interactive panel discussion to provide an overview of trends in women’s labor globally and the link between labor rights and gender equality. In the second and third segments, participants will divide into sector focus groups (including domestic work, export manufacturing (garment and electronics), agriculture, and the public sector. In the last session, participants will reconvene to present priorities and strategies emerging from the sector-specific discussions and to discuss and debate possible new cross-regional and cross-sectoral strategies that should or could be pursued after the forum as well as mechanisms for doing that.
The mainstream economic system and the economic policies derived from it have significant impacts on women’s livelihoods and are a strong force in shaping their possibilities to fully exercise their rights and live a life with dignity. Any piece of the Forum program offers an opportunity for learning, but in particular an entire session block on the first day—our Feminist Economics Toolbox—is dedicated to information sharing, awareness-raising, and skills-building on themes linked to economics, economic policies, or other issues of key concern for feminists interested in transforming economic power. The Forum International Planning Committee developed a list of themes to cover in this session block—just a small sample of the possibilities—and we set out to identify an array of groups who could speak to them.

Each session is intended to do three things:
1. Outline the basic foundations of the theme: Why is this important?
2. Ground the relevance of each theme in the current context: What difference is this making now?
3. Provide information and analytical tools to better understand the implications for advancing women’s rights.

Feminist Economics 101

This session is intended to provide a basic understanding of Feminist Economics’ (FE) contribution both to economics and to feminism: What does FE mean? How has FE developed over time? What are FE main issues? What are FE critiques to mainstream economics? What resources does FE provides to feminist activism?

Demystifying Economics: Macroeconomic policy

What is macroeconomic policy? What are examples of how macroeconomic policies shape the realities of women’s lives? Understanding the overall impact of macroeconomic policies on human rights can be an effective tool in feminist activism. Participants attending this tool-box session will explore the linkages between macroeconomic policies and human rights.

Gross Domestic Product (GDP) / Growth

What counts, what doesn’t count, who’s doing the counting, and what are the data used for? After an introduction to the basics using chapters from the Who’s Counting? video, we will explore the current status of national income accounting, the best questions feminists can be asking, and the best strategies to adopt.

Corporate Campaigning 101

Learn how campaign organizations working to advance worker rights in global supply chains balance campaigning and engagement with corporations to pressure for change. We will share practical lessons based on real cases in the garment industry over the last decade. Participants will learn basic dos and don’ts in corporate campaigning.

Rethinking Ideas of Work from a Feminist Perspective

This session will explore how feminists have sought to reconceptualize the idea of work. It will highlight the artificial nature of the distinction between paid and unpaid work. And it will discuss how the rise of global care chains has made visible some of the hidden dimensions of women’s work.

Climate Change Finance and Women’s Empowerment

In this session we will explore the gender dimensions of international climate change finance, including essential nuts and bolts of gender climate change adaptation, mitigation and technology transfer and development. Participants will map out the instruments, institutions, and modalities of climate change financing as they exist and are emerging globally, regionally, and nationally.

Demystifying the Financial Crisis
The financial crisis of 2008 is ongoing. World leaders are not solving it, but are rather using it to impose austerity measures upon entire populations. It is not hard to understand—but if you don’t, you can’t act against it. This is a citizen’s and a women’s issue.

SPKERS: SUSAN GEORGE, TRANSNATIONAL INSTITUTE

Deconstructing the International Financial Architecture and What it Means for Gender Justice
This session will examine key pillars of the international financial architecture, fiscal and monetary policy, financial markets, public debt, and the role of actors ranging from Wall Street, to central banks, and others. We will focus on the ideology and principles shaping the current system and how it could be re-structured.

SPKERS: BHUMIKA MUCHHALA, THIRD WORLD NETWORK

Understanding International Financial Institutions (IFIs)
The session will highlight: 1. An overview on the IFIs: what they are, their role, and how they influence and impact country policies, investments and women’s rights and livelihoods. 2. How civil society can advocate for gender sensitive IFI investments that promote women’s rights and justice.

SPKERS: ELAINE ZUCKERMAN AND SARAH BIBLER (GENDER ACTION, USA); CHRISTIAN TANYI (MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. FOUNDATION – LUKMEF); ANA QUIRÓS VÍQUEZ (EL CENTRO DE INFORMACIÓN Y SERVICIOS DE ASERSORIA EN SALUD – CISAS, NICARAGUA)

Surviving Money and the Financial System
An audio-visual presentation, talk and Q&A on how money and financial systems operate and impact on women of limited means; how the system serves economic purpose, but also deceives and impoverishes through abuse. It interactively provides what women need to know and do to counter the system and survive.

SPKERS: NAJMA SADDEQUE AND DENE SUMBUL, SHIRKAT GAH

Global Economy Education And Women’s Empowerment Exercises: Broadening the analysis, broadening the base
In this round robin workshop, participants will experience and learn how to conduct strategic education that blends women’s empowerment, labor organizing techniques, and global economy education and analysis that enables labor unions to connect with women workers, inspire them to become members, and helps build their agency and power.

SPKERS: LISA MCGOWAN, SOLIDARITY CENTER, KALTHOUIM BARKALLAH, TUNISIAN RAILWAY UNION, SUZAN MUSHARBASH.

Food Sovereignty and Food Security
This session will present basic notions of concepts of food security and food sovereignty; where these concepts emerged and their contexts. As well, the session will highlight distinctions between the two and their relevance for advancing women’s rights and economic justice.

SPKERS: FRANCISCA RODRIGUEZ, ASOCIACIÓN NACIONAL DE MULHERES RURAIS E ÍNDIGENAS DE CHILE, ANAMURI AND CLOC-VIA CAMPESINA; BERIN ERTURK, CIFTCI-SEN, MEMBER LA VIA CAMPESINA EUROPEAN COORDINATION

Commodification of Knowledge: How increasing access and availability of the internet has transformed the way knowledge is produced and shared
What does it mean for women’s rights that most online platforms and services are owned by a few transnational corporations? How do international copyright agreements, data protection and privacy affect our advocacy? Who governs the Internet, content and data we produce and exchange, and how can feminists engage with and participate in this process?

SPKERS: JAC KEE, ASSOCIATION FOR PROGRESSIVE COMMUNICATIONS WOMEN’S NETWORKING SUPPORT PROGRAMME

Exploring the Gender Specific Impacts of New Forms of International Trade: How, Why and Where?
Bilateral free trade and investment agreements are bringing in much more than trade, and their gender impact is changing in nature and depth. This session will inform about and explore some of these issues across sectors such as agriculture, industry and services, with a focus on developing countries.

The Wellness Area is a comfortable and safe environment to enjoy a moment of tranquility during the Forum. It aims to help Forum participants to recuperate, reinvigorate and calm their minds. Organized by AWID in partnership with Consorcio Oaxaca, Institute for Women’s Empowerment, JUST Associates (JASS), Kvinna, Till Kvinna, and Linksbridge.

In addition to self-care and wellness practices, visitors to the area can engage in conversations about tools and approaches for safety and well-being. There will be scheduled activities for practice and reflection, as well as opportunities to sign up for one-on-one consultations and care.

Self-care and security is a right for all who work on defending and promoting women’s rights. As activists, we need to exercise this right for ourselves, and not only for the people whose rights we work so hard to defend. The Wellness Area provides an excellent opportunity to share experiences and tools regarding the political importance of working for the well-being, security, and self-care of women’s rights activists. We encourage everyone to exercise their rights so “Take one for self-care”, and give yourself permission to relax during one of the breakout sessions!

The Wellness Area is located on the upper level of the conference centre, the Haliç Auditorium Balcony Upper Level Foyer.

Mobilizing Resources for Women’s Rights and Gender Equality Organizing and Movement Building.

The program for the Resource Mobilization Hub was developed in close collaboration with peers in the funding community and women’s rights movement. We appreciate the many contributions that have informed this new component of the Forum agenda. This Hub offers a dynamic space for discussions, dialogue, sharing, and learning related to mobilizing resources, funding trends, and fundraising for women’s rights and gender equality for both donors and women’s rights advocates.

Specific schedules for the Resource Mobilization Hub will be posted outside of the Hub space throughout the Forum.

The Resource Mobilization Hub is located on the ground level of the conference centre, Lale Room.

ACTIVITIES

EVENING PLENARY FUNDERS FORUM

Tapping Current Opportunities and Assessing Challenges to Mobilize Resources for Women’s Rights and Feminists Organizing Around the World

Seven years ago, we asked the question “Where is the Money for Women’s Rights?” in a context where many funders and activists agreed that donor interest in women and women’s rights had peaked and then faded. Now nearly everywhere you look—from corporate foundations to mainstream media, international financial institutions to large international development organizations—we hear talk of investing in women and gender equality not just as smart economics, but also as “the right thing to do”. This renewed interest is important progress and it also comes with some challenges; how to ensure the results of these investments are making a real impact to advance women’s rights in the longer term?

Our panel will explore how various donors are putting their commitments into practice, latest data on the funding situation of women’s organizations and how diverse development actors can work together to ensure that the resources becoming available for women really contribute to longer-term structural change and we tap current opportunities to mobilize more resources to support women’s rights and feminist organizing around the world.

Breakout Sessions

Look for the Resource Mobilization Hub icon in the breakout session list for detailed descriptions of these sessions.

- Funding Landscape: Setting the tone
- Trends Affecting Women’s and Rights Funding: Global and regional perspectives
- Invest in Women—it pays!
- Big, Bold Giving for Women and Girls: Cultural and Financial Issues. The Women Moving Millions Campaign
- A Dialogue with Donors and Activists on Funding Women’s Economic Rights, Not Women’s Economic Rescue
- The Present and Future of Women’s Funds: Activists have the floor
- Where Is the Money for Girls’ Rights?
- Women’s Relationship to Money: How does it affect our activist work?
- Round Table Discussion: The Task Ahead: Mutual learnings of the past four days and next steps to ensure sustainably funded women’s rights movements

Skills Sharing

- Economic Solidarity: Raising funds and awareness for feminist activism through resource sharing
- Rights-Based Evaluation for Social Change Work: A skill and strategy building session led by feminists reclaiming evaluation

Other Activities:

- Donor Office Hours: participants can sign up to have one-to-one or small group conversations with particular donors. Sign-up sheets and information available in the Resource Mobilization Hub.
- Letters to Donors Postbox: representatives from women’s movements can drop off anonymous letters they have always wished to send to their donors.
- Letters to Grantees Postbox: representatives from donor agencies can drop off anonymous letters they have always wished to send to their grantees.
- Donor Sharing Space: An opportunity for donors to share and learn from peers about funding women and girls and women’s rights and gender equality issues.
- Livingroom Conversations: Dialogues amongst funders from different sectors as well as between donors and activists on a variety of topics led by donor peers on relevant forum themes.
- Come and Engage! Informal lunchtime discussions on resource mobilization topics.
For women’s rights activists to challenge economic and development policies and practices, they must have a strong understanding and analysis of their contexts, basic knowledge of economics and development terminology to be able to engage substantively in the spaces in which economic policies are debated and created, influence decision making and have opportunities to learn more about the experiences and work of others—including other movements.

The program for the Economic Education Area was developed drawing on inputs and insights from a broad range of individuals doing related work. We appreciate the many contributions that have informed this new component of the 2012 AWID Forum agenda.

The economic education space is an opportunity for you to exchange different forms of trainings and education for transformation on economics, gender and development, and to present and share tools, methodologies and reflections. It is intended to generate momentum around the need to revitalize, rethink and recreate new forms of collaboration across groups to provide the much needed training and education on economics and development to women’s rights advocates from around the world. It is a space where we hope to encourage strategic thinking and dialogue among key actors engaged on these kind of activities about how to foster training and education when there is a wealth of experience on which to better equip activists to advance economic justice and women’s rights.

The Economic Education Area is located on the ground level of the conference centre Galata Ballroom.

Demystifying Economics Sessions
Sessions aimed at providing an informal space for any Forum participants interested in debriefing on the sessions they attended during the day, how they felt, and what they learnt or found interesting. On April 19 and 20 in the evenings.

The Reading Stop
We know you will be very busy. What with sessions, roundtables, caucuses and meeting new people, you may have precious little free time. We encourage you, however, to take a spare moment or two at the Reading Stop to read the latest materials, analysis and tools brought by different groups and individuals with expertise on gender and economics education that will be available on this space.

Films on Display Corner
Different groups and individuals with expertise on gender and economics education will feature their work through short films, documentaries or videos. Throughout the AWID Forum, several of these pieces will be on display.

Resources Stand
Gender and economics education experts will bring their books, materials and tools to the Forum for display and organized according to regions and themes.

The Learning Journey Tree
You can post a comment or an event on a tree to create a visual journey of individuals’ learning experiences and opportunities on economics and gender.

Feedback please!
You can leave your impressions, comments and suggestions on a board or in a fish bowl.
The Feminist ICT Hub builds on the success of the Feminist Technology Exchange Hub at the 2008 AWID Forum. Organized by AWID in partnership with the Women’s Networking Support Program-Association for Progressive Communications (APC WNSP) and a range of other feminist communicators and women’s rights organizations, including Feminist International Radio Endeavour (FIRE), Tactical Technology Collective, Women Living Under Muslim Law, Women’s Learning Partnership, World Pulse, Pathways of Women’s Empowerment, Frontline Defenders, and Breakthrough TV.

The Feminist ICT Hub aims to: build the ICT capacity of women’s rights advocates and organizations; raise awareness of the feminist politics and practices of technology; explore the links between communication rights and economic power; and provide feminist communicators with a space from which to cover the 2012 AWID Forum. This hub will offer selected breakout sessions, skills-sharing, and open mike. Other activities will include: a space to produce content on the Forum, resources and support on ICT’s to advance women’s rights and transform economic power, security and privacy clinics, the FIREplace from Feminist International Radio Endeavour, and video and digital story screenings.

The Feminist ICT Hub is located on the upper level of the conference centre, Kasimpasa 5 Room.

AWID Membership Meeting: Join us in Celebrating Our 30th Anniversary!

At the 2012 Forum, AWID members will come together to celebrate AWID’s 30th anniversary. Lydia Alpizar, AWID Executive Director, and Lina Abou-Habib, AWID Board President, will share highlights from our 30 year history of collectively working to strengthen women’s movements to advance women’s rights and gender equality worldwide. Members of our Board of Directors, who are elected by the AWID membership, will share highlights from the important work they undertake and information on how you could join them as a Board member by participating in the upcoming board elections!

Join us at the AWID membership meeting and explore how we can continue to work together to strengthen the voice, impact and influence of women’s rights advocates, organizations and movements. All AWID Members attending the Forum are invited to participate!

The AWID Membership Area is located on the ground level of the conference centre, Gallery 2.
There are 139 breakout sessions during the Forum. These are self-organized sessions of 1.5 hours each. Proposals for breakout sessions were submitted in response to the Call for Proposals. These were reviewed and then selected by the Forum International Planning Committee in a thorough process which took into account relevance to the Forum theme and methodology; and also a balanced overall Forum program to reflect the diversity of women's rights organizing, regions, and constituencies. The selection process was extremely challenging as we received 800 high quality proposals. Thank you to all who submitted proposals.

...7 Hours and 55 Minutes: Exploring money and work in sex work
“7 Hours 55 Minutes” is an educational tool designed by sex-workers for others to understand how we do what we do, not counting the five minutes we spend having sex, and to see where does sex-worker money go? Participants take on roles and pass through true life situations.

A Dialogue with Donors and Activists on Funding Women’s Economic Rights, Not Women’s Economic Rescue
Current discourses identify women’s economic engagement as a strategy to improve economic indicators, ignoring root causes of women’s poverty and shifting donors’ focus away from promoting women’s rights. This session will explore strategies to challenge instrumentalist views and to promote a discourse focused on women’s rights.

PRESENTERS: ANASUYA SENGUPTA, SUSAN JESSOP, SANGEETA BUDHIRAJA
ORGANIZERS: GLOBAL FUND FOR WOMEN, ASTRAEA LESBIAN FOUNDATION FOR JUSTICE, MAMA CASH

A Dialogue with Kurdish Women
In addition to four Kurdish speakers, other Kurdish women participants are encouraged to join the audience for this session. How can we transform unfavorable political conditions through women’s solidarity? On which issues we can come together and where are our differences about? We can find answers to these questions together.

PRESENTERS: GULTAN KIŞANAK, NEVIN İL, CANAN TANRİKULU, HANĐAN ÇAĞLAYAN

Access to Water: Implications for gender equality and economic justice
Access to clean water is critical for life and livelihoods. Yet, millions of people lack access to clean water, often leaving women disproportionately affected. Caucuses
Caucuses are self-organized by forum participants on a wide range of issues and interests, and are held during lunch time at the forum. Their purposes range from structured networking among a particular group; to smaller strategic discussions; to gather ideas or consult on particular initiatives; to developing joint statements or petitions. Please refer to the schedule for more information about each Caucus.

Campaigns Corner
The campaigns corner provides an opportunity for organizations currently involved in campaigns to share information and literature about their campaign, collect signatures, build solidarity with their causes and encourage Forum participants to take part. Campaign exhibitors will be present at their table for the duration of the display.

The Francophone Village
In order to promote francophone participation and engagement during the Forum, Genre en Action is organizing a “Francophone Village.” The village is a space for Francophone participants to meet, network, exchange and debate on topics linked to specific contexts and issues. It will also be a meeting place where information will be made available in French about the Forum’s organization, sessions and plenaries. Every day there will be a lunch-time caucus, francophone media coverage and training sessions for audio-visual techniques. The Francophone Village will be a place for learning and discovery, connecting and celebration of francophone women’s rights activism. Visit the Village and help build a sense of belonging for the francophone participants during this unique international experience!
